NATURALLY enough we regard the movements of Russia in any part of the East with some little distrust. The interests England has at stake there are so great that it would be strange indeed if she did not look with suspicion on a Power so grasping and ambibitious as the Muscovite Empire. Russia is ever anxious to extend her boundaries, and there is great difficulty in imagining at which point her aggression will next turn. During the reign of the present Emperor, however, this policy has not been so obtrusively propounded, though there is little doubt the successor of Nicholas will, ere many years have passed, find himself constrained, in deference-to-public opinion, to seek to carry out the programme long ago outlined by his predecessors. It is well known Russia has always coveted the dominions of the Sultan, especially Constantinople, and it is her fixed resolve some day to obtain pos- purpose before session of the wished-for territory. But is now desired to bring about this result by intrigue rather than violence. Bussia has no wish to rush into a war that might not only prove costly but disastrous. She has profited in some measure by the lesson she received in the Crimea. She has accom plished much since then by calmly waiting her opportunities. One came during the Franco-German war, and she failed not to take advantage of it to declare the most important clause of that Treaty won by the expenditure | fishing junk, and on enquiry he found no perof so much blood and treasure in the Crimea to be no longer binding on her. Since that that her boat was missing, and on seeing the time she has conceived that England's protectorate of the Sick Man has practically ceased. Certainly our abstention from active interference in Turkish affairs lends some colour to this assumption, and it is not very wonderful that Russia has fallen into such a

An article which has recently appeared in the St. Petersburg Golos has revived public interest in the great Eastern question. According to that organ, "the Oriental question has recently entered a new phase." England, says the Golos, " has allowed her influence on the Bosphorus to decrease ever since the Crimeau War," and, as a proof of this state- ever, had fuiled in his purpose, having made a last Peking letters. In this event, the death of ment, are noticed the opinions of the press bungle of it. and recent assurances of English statesmen that British policy on the Continent in the time he had attempted to commit suicide. future would be one of non-intervantion. France is considered-te-be-no-longer in a position to interfere, Italy has her hands full of pressing matters connected with finance and her inward security, Austria, is too regardful of her own commercial interests on the Danube to care about the "political susceptibilities of Turkey," and Germany is supposed to be favourable to Russian views: out of gratitude for the neutrality, during the late wars, of the St. Petersburg Governments The Golos plumes itself on the prompt settlement of the Roumanian have a plain setting. difficulty without Anglo-French influence being brought to bear on it. It says:- "A remarkable circumstance is the promptness of the Porto in answering the notes of Russia, Germany, and Austria. Formerly such notes took months to answer; now exactly two days were required for the purpose. The THE expedition of the Turks is no doubt indicative of a wish to satisfy the wants of the three Empires; but it is equally interesting ing of shareholders to be held on the 15th to note that the reply was given before England and France can have had time to advise the Porto. Thus the alliance of the three Emperors, which secures the peace of Europe, proved likewise powerful in the East." in other words, Russian influence bas once more becarestored at Constantinople, and this triple alliance is to prove the lever by which the subtle policy of Russia, comprehending the slow dismemberment of the Ottoman Empire, is to be worked. Meantime the big bully puts on a virtuous and benevolent aspoet, assumes the attitude of friend, adviser, and patron of Turkey, and special protestor of the Christians in that country. In Central Asia Russia is not idle. She could afford to disavow any intention of occupying Khiva, for she in all probability was well aware that future complications would arise, or might be created, which would necossitate, or seem to necessitate, her active interference. No doubt Khiva will before long become an integral portion of the Czan's extent of $60,182.20, the equivalent of $18,000 Empire. Rumour affirms that Russia has been intriguing with Japan to attack Corea; Sassoon, Rowett, and G. F. Heard, leaving of course, with a view of promoting her own selfish designs. Japan and Corea would constitute valuable appanages of an Empire existing committee, consisting of Mesers. J. J. whose great want is productive soil. Of barren acres she has more than enough, doubtless, and hence she turns a longing glance on the wealth of India and China. NEW CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE - Failing them, Japan would not be a bad prize, and Corea and Formosa are not to be. despised. Saghalien has already been virtually wrested from the Japanese. Of course, there is great danger of Russia being wrongfully accused of intentions she never entertained, but past history abundantly proves the necessity of watching her. And it is very doubtful whether any member of the present dynasty can, even if so inclined, Orders for Copies may be sent to the Daily deviate materially from the line of policy which has been so steadily followed since the days of Prize the Great. > On Tuesday evening, at about the dinner hour, a Chipaman was found prowling about the boys' apartments in the rear of a gentleman's residence in Hongkew. One of the boys happened to leave the dining room for some purpose, and found the fellow in an upper room. On being asked what he wanted there, he replied that he had mude a mistake in the bouse. as he intended to have gone into the next one adding that he had been told by the cook engaged there that he might go and take out quatudy, and yesterday taken before the Chinese magistrate and Dr. Yates, at the Mixed Court, when, after evidence of the above facts bad been given, he was remanded for further enquire.

Between six, and seven o'clock last night, seizure of opium, alleged to have been amuggled, was made in the Canton-road, under more than usually peculiar circumstances. It appear that some lekin runners watched a Chinaman go into a house in the above-named road, and on his coming out again they suspected he had opium concealed on his person. They accord ingly seized him, when several Europeans came up, and a struggle ensued for the possession of the drug which was found on him. The resulwas that one of the runners was severaly out on the hand, with, as is supposed, a flexible stick one of the Europeans was carrying, and ultimately they all went to the Central Police Station, and laid the case before Mr. Inspector Fowler. Four balls of the opinin were taken. to the Station, which one of the foreigners portunity of stealing. Seeing him standing in claimed as his, saying that four other balls had been "stolen." The case will of course be referred to the Mixed Court for disposal.

Last evening shortly after eight c'clock, an alarm of fire rang through the Settlements, and caused considerable excitement for a time. Preparations were being made with commendable speed to get the engines and other fire extinguishing appliances ready for action, when that useful adjunct, the electric telegraph, flashed a message that the services of the brigade would not be needed, as the fire had nearly burnt itself out. Upon visiting the scene, which was upon the bank of the Detence cour. Oreck, at the upper side of the French Seitlement, it was ascertained that a Chinese bamboobuilt dairy and outbuildings, the latter being filled with straw, had from some unexplained cause caught fire, and burnt with an intensity that destroyed them before the French fire-engines could get to the snot. greatest danger lay in the proximity of some other Chinese houses, towards on to which the wind carried quantities of the hurning straw, but fortunately without setting them on fire. It is only natural that the death of the Emperor and the uncertainty in which the occurrence left the succession, should give rise to rumours of triuble at the capital. And as i China experience has once and again shown that it is unsafe to disbelieve a rumour entirely we quote a report which was very current both in native and foreign circles yesterday, that the possession of the Dragon throne was already being contended for vi el armis. Our own efforts to test the truthfulness or otherwise of the rumour have, however, quite failed of result The report was that news had arrived to the effect that the palace was surrounded, and that a large army was at Peking, supposed to be Li Hung-chang's southern logion. Rumour unfortunately does not define the situation more Another and more probable report is that the Vicerov of Chibli was called to Peking on the death of his Imperial Master, and that accompanied merely by his ordinary retinue and quard. Until more definite news arrive it is fair to assume that if such an important crisis us that angrested by the former statement. had supervened on the peaceful position of affairs at last advices; something more than a very shadowy ramour dit would have reached on the other hand, that the Chinese officials expect to receive the "jayful proclamation " announcing the choice of a new Emperor, about the 27th-of the moon-3rd Feb.-which would seem to indicate that they rely on the quick and peaceable solution suggested in our

Then I looked, and there on the ground. Were two lovely children at play; The door-yard turf all around Was spotted with daising and plake: From his apple-trees showered the notes Of a dozen ecstatic throats. And up from the grass-lot below. Came the gossip of bebolinks.

And, behold! like a cloud, overhead Flocked a multitude of white doves They circled round stable and shed, Alighting on sill and roof: All astir in the sun, so white, All a-murmur with love, the sight Sent a pung to my softening heart. An arrow of sweet reproof.

And I thought of our foolish strife. And "How hateful is hatel" I said "Under all that we see of his life Is a world we never may know, With its sorrows, and solace, and dreams And even though had as be seeme, He is as he is for a cause,
